

The Charleston Convention & Visitors Bureau is focused on the well-being of visitors to the Charleston area. While Charleston remains open for business, we respect our visitors' decisions to travel based on their comfort level. The Charleston CVB is monitoring developments of the coronavirus outbreak and its impact on travelers to and from the area.

With the situation evolving rapidly we encourage the traveling public to follow any guidance offered by the Centers for Disease Control (CDC), as well as local and state public health authorities. The CVB is working closely with government officials, national travel industry authorities and our local hospitality partners to take proper precautions to continue promoting healthy and positive travel experiences.

The CVB's guiding principle is to seek and adhere to the most up-to-date expert guidance and follow recommendations from the CDC and the U.S. Travel Association.
